

Let's Practice!

I wasn't really sure ...

Instructions: Underline the sentences that DO NOT express uncertainty about past events. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. Dogs are bright and resourceful. Take my dog, Coco for example. Last Friday she prevented me from sleeping in by scratching on my bedroom door at 6:00 a.m. She's used to getting her breakfast at exactly that time every day. She would have thought that this particular Friday was no exception. The problem was that it was a holiday, and I was looking forward to getting a bit of extra rest. I should have known Coco wouldn't want to do the same.
2. Second, dogs are intuitive. Coco always barks at least ten seconds before I hear anyone at the door. I always think that she can't possibly have heard anything. However, her doggy sense is far more powerful than my human ears.
3. Third, canines are kind-hearted and personable. She loves having company. Just last week, my brother visited, and Coco must have brought out every single one of her toys and set them at his feet. She wanted to share her most valuable treasures with him.

Let's Practice!

What kind of verb is it?

Instructions: Classify the sentences below by writing their corresponding number in the categories you are given.

1. She sounds happy.
2. I think they are among the most intelligent animals.
3. She loves having company.
4. She instantly realized that she had made a mistake and ran off.
5. We promise to bring her with us.
6. She regretted that she had to spend an hour in her cage, surely, but for her the punishment was worth the crime.
7. I predict that she wasn't too happy.
8. I confess that I have a bit of a bias.

State

Mental State

Performative